The term "kilo note" is a colloquialism typically used to refer to a banknote with a denomination of 1,000.

In the Indian context, this specifically refers to the "₹1000 banknote". These notes were widely used for many years; however, they ceased to be legal tender in India following the demonetization process announced by the Government of India on November 8, 2016. Since that time, the ₹1000 note has not been in circulation.

If you are referring to a different context or currency, please let me know so I can provide more specific information. T
